ATLANTA:
M. LYNCH, SUCCESSOR TO WM. KAY,
1859.

P R E F A C E .

We present our first issue of the Atlanta Directory with the belief that it will be found as nearly accurate as any book of the kind can possibly be.

The growing importance of the City demands that its population and business should be represented in this shape, and the compiler expresses the hope that this volume will be the first of a long series.

It depends upon the public spirit of the business men and the patronage they extend to the enterprize, to determine whether the publication shall be continued.

The publisher begs to extend to the subscribers to the present volume, his sincere thanks for their liberality; also, to G. B. HAYGOOD, Esq. for the sketch of Atlanta, furnished for this volume

SKETCH OF ATLANTA.

Atlanta is situated seven miles east south-east of the Chattahoochee River, on the dividing ridge between the waters of the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico; on the 34th parallel of north latitude, at an elevation of one thousand and fifty feet above the level of the sea.

The Ocmulgee River, which flows to the Atlantic, has its source in the central part of the city. The head spring of South River, its principal tributary, being located within the Railroad Reserve near the present passenger depot, its precise spot being now indicated by the large perennial cistern, between the Holland House and the Macon and Western Depot, on the south side of the railroad track; while Walton Spring, an early celebrity of the place, situated a little north of the road, flows into the Chattahoochee, and thence to the Gulf of Mexico; so that here in the heart of the city, the marriage of the waters of the Atlantic and the Gulf might have been celebrated high in air, by our own engine companies, drawing their supplies the while, from the natural fountains, flowing thence to their far distant destinations in the bosom of the Atlantic and the Gulf. But Charleston must needs go to Memphis, that old Ocean, pent up in hoops and staves, may be received into the embraces of his Amazon bride, and the "father of waters" is shorn of his glory, and is changed into a huge "water station" on the road to the West.

On the 21st of December, 1836, the Legislature of Georgia passed an Act authorizing the construction of a railroad communication by the State, from some point on the Tennessee line, subsequently extended to the Tennessee River, to some point on the south-eastern bank of the Chattahoochee River, which should be most eligible for the extension of branches thence to other important points in Georgia.

The present site of the public depot was located sometime afterwards, by Wilson Lumpkin, Ex-Governor of the State, upon the recommendation of the Chief Engineer, Mr. C. F. M. Garnett. The station was called "Terminus" prior to December 23d, 1843, when the place was incorporated by the name of Marthasville, in compliment to Miss Martha Lumpkin, daughter of his Excellency, Governor Lumpkin, and whom we thus recognise as the early matro-nymic of the thrifty, bustling village, the embryo city. In the short space of four years the village had outgrown the expectations of its early inhabitants, and had become too fast, too gross, too great and too pretentious to wear any longer, with maidenly modesty, the name of its fair matro-nymic; a change was demanded, and on the 29th of December, 1847, it was incorporated as a city by the name of Atlanta, a name which is understood to have been proposed by J. Edgar Thompson, at that time Chief Engineer of the Georgia Railroad. The signification of the name, the reasons for its adoption, and the various theories on the subject have now become a theme of inquiry and investigation not without interest. The writer has heard it claimed as due in honor to a mythological goddess, Atlanta, said to have been remarkable for fleetness, strength and endurance. It was certainly a fast town then, and may have been supposed entitled to the honor of a recognition by the goddess, by reason of its early character, and its wonderful achievements. The infant has become a giant, and is rapidly overcoming the obstacles to its growth and prosperity, and making the surrounding country, and neighboring villages, all tributary to its prosperity, permanency and celebrity. The name was for a short time written Atalanta, which seems to favor the claims of the goddess. An orator of no mean pretensions, claimed for it the signification of "A city among the hills," while a shrewd writer has declared that it was the opposite of "rus in erbi," and proclaimed it "the city in the woods." And its commercial and geographical position has recently procured for it the appellation of "The Gate City."

And still another theory is set up by some who claim for it an origin more worthy of its present importance as a railroad entrepot, and commercial emporium, taken in connection with its future prospects as a great railroad centre, and manufacturing city. The great State work, connecting the western waters with the Atlantic, commencing at Chattanooga on the Tennessee River and terminating at this point had been nearly completed.

The name "Western and Atlantic Railroad" had been given to it by the Legislature of Georgia, and it was not inaptly considered the great connecting artery, through which must pass the incalculable mass of produce, manufactures and commerce from the great valley of the West, and the Atlantic coast, and the imports from abroad passing thence to the far West.

Atlanta had been permanently fixed as the south-eastern terminus of that great State work, and gave a local idea to its eastern terminus, and that idea represented or qualified by the adjective Atlantic, was incomplete of itself, but clearly pointed to something more definite, and the mind is put upon the inquiry for the thing signified. The connections by rail from Charleston by way of Augusta, and from Savannah by way of Macon, had both been completed to this point. These roads had been gradually ascending the hills from the coast, in search of a "north-west passage," they had searched the hills upon which the city stands, and here they met the Western and Atlantic road, just emerging from the wilds of the north-west, seeking by a sinuous and difficult ascent from the Western Valley, for a highway to the Atlantic. They met together in our streets, they embraced each other upon these head-lands of the Atlantic.

These Atlantic head-lands, when embodied in the noun Atlanta, to our mind, meets the demand and represents the ideal of the thing sought after, and the mind rests upon it as the thing signified by the several indices pointing to Atlanta as the proper name for such a city, in such a place. This we now state to the public as the true derivation, sustained by the facts in the case.

Atlanta has had a growth unexampled in the history of the South. In 1854, the population had reached 6,025. The increase for several years has averaged 1,000 per annum. On the first of April, 1859, it is ascertained by the census taken under the State authority, to be 11,500 souls.

The assessed value of the real estate in the city the present year, 1859, is $2,760,000, and the personalty, cash, merchandise, etc., in proportion.

The number of stores in 1854, was 57, exclusive of drinking saloons. The amount of goods sold in 1853, was $1,017,000, and amount sold in 1858 is not known with accuracy, but is believed to have been about $3,000,000, and is now rapidly increasing. It is widening and extending the area of its supply on every side. Dry goods are sold to the country for over one hundred miles around, on terms as favorable to purchasers as the retail markets of the great northern cities, New York itself not ex-pted, and still our merchants are prosperous, thrifty and energetic. No respectable house here had to suspend during the severe crisis in commercial affairs in 1857 and 1858.

The great secret of the safety, success, and independence of our business, is to be found in the fact that sales are made at low rates, almost entirely for cash, and the profits, though small in detail, are often repeated and amount to a vast sum in the aggregate, a few have fallen by unfortunate speculations.

The number of stores and other business houses at present is unknown to the writer. Nineteen commodious brick stores were erected in 1858, and as many more are now in progress of construction in 1859, besides a large number of fine dwellings, mostly of brick; many of the new improvements are imposing structures, and would be creditable in the elegant portions of any of our modern cities.

There are at present four capacious hotels, now open, and in successful operation, and another still more extensive, is nearly completed, designed, we understand, chiefly for the accommodation of families, hitherto a felt necessity in the city.

The city now has in successful operation four large and flourishing machine shops, two of these are connected with railroad companies, and two belong to private companies, where stationary engines, mill gearing, with almost every variety of castings, and machinery are manufactured at short notice. Two planing mills, and sash and blind factories are also in successful operation, besides there are various smaller manufacturing establishments in the city; three or four tanneries, one or two shoe manufactories, besides several smaller establishments. The most important establishment in the place is the rolling mill, for the manufacture of railroad iron, which is capable of turning out thirty tons of railroad iron of superior quality.

The clothing trade has become an item of no inconsiderable importance within the last few years, and presents some new features when contrasted with any other southern cities of equal size and age. The manufacture of clothing in this city is a decided success, and has increased with an unparalleled rapidity over any southern city. In 1854 five hands were employed in the manufacture of clothing, the number now thus employed exceeds seventy-five, the larger portion of whom are females. The clothing made here has been received with favor by the public, and is believed to have attracted much attention to the wholesale trade of the city in that article. In this connection it may be stated that this is the great southern depot for the sale of the most approved models of sewing machines, the use of which, extensively, has doubtless added greatly to the trade in the clothing department.

The city was first brilliantly lighted with gas, manufactured from Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee coal, on the 25th of December, 1855.

The incorporated shape of the city is a circle two miles in diameter, with a handle of half a mile in length, and six hundred yards wide along the line of the Macon and Western Railroad. It covers a portion of sixteen original land lots, each of which was laid off upon a plan to suit the views of the respective owners, and hence our streets are not all so regular in width and uniform in direction as is desirable, many of them being much too narrow for public convenience.

The City Hall and County Court House is a convenient, commodious and handsome structure, erected in 1854 and 1855, at a cost of a little over $30,000. It is 70 by 100 feet in size, two stories high, of fine architectural proportion and design, well adapted to the uses intended, is elegantly finished throughout, surmounted by an imposing dome, and is alike creditable to the city and the artist.

The medical college is now in its fifth course of lectures, all delivered in the summer, with a larger class than any former one, numbering one hundred and fifty-six students, has had its day of probation, trial and difficulties, but it is now a decided success, and its enemies and rivals have almost ceased to persecute it. It has an able and efficient faculty, and a very complete chemical apparatus, and is collecting a very respectable museum.

The geographical position of Atlanta being nearly in the centre of the southern section of the American Union, at the point of the great railroad crossings in a right line from New York to New Orleans, and nearly equi-distant from each; four prominent lines of railroad all centering here, and pouring into the depots and warehouses of the city an amount of trade, and transporting through it a vast tide of travel; situated, too, just upon the dividing line between the cotton and grain sections of the State, altogether, give to Atlanta facilities for receiving and distributing the productions and the commerce of the country from one section to another, greater than can be claimed for any other inland city in the South. Atlanta is now connected by rail with Chattanooga, Nashville, Memphis, and thence with the Upper Mississippi, also, with London and Knoxville, Tennessee; Lynchburg, Virginia; and thence with the great lines North and east; on the south-west with Montgomery by rail, thence by water with Mobile, New Orleans, and all the wer Mississippi; also with Columbus and all south-western Georgia, and Savannah, and the Atlantic, through Macon. By the Georgia Railroad with Augusta, Charleston, Columbia, Greenville, most of the prominent places in North and South Carolina, Virginia, and the great Northern cities. Another railroad is now in projection, and considerable progress made towards its accomplishment, in the direction of Andersen Court House, South Carolina, through the beautiful and productive territory, known as North-east Georgia, and another still has been chartered from this point to the great and inexhaustible coal fields of north-eastern Alabama, destined to supply fuel and motive power to the teeming millions that shall inhabit these lands for untold ages. Forty-four freight and passenger trains arrive and depart daily from the city.

The city now contains thirteen Christian churches, and one more has been recently projected.

It is not believed that any other city in the country is blessed with greater or better facilities for procuring building materials, a supply of granite near at hand, of a quality peculiarly adapted to building purposes is literally inexhaustible; bricks of good quality are made in and around the city on reasonable terms. Lumber of good quality is also obtained at reasonable prices; lime is produced in any desirable quantity near at hand.

The population of the city is remarkable for its activity and enterprise. Most of the inhabitants came here for the purpose of bettering their fortunes by engaging actively in some kind of business, and this presents the anomaly of having very few aged persons residing in it; and our people show their democratic pulses by each allowing his neighbor to attend to his own business, and our ladies even are allowed to attend to their own domestic and household affairs without being ruled out of respectable society.

The mechanical element prevails in our city, and the majority of them are enterprising, thrifty and prosperous men, who are rapidly rising in the public esteem.

The health of the city is almost unprecedented, being entirely exempt from the usual summer and fall fevers, cholera, &c. No epidemic has ever prevailed here, and the bills of mortality show a state of health almost without a parallel.

The city is chiefly supplied with the very best free stone water, from wells usually from thirty to forty feet deep, though a very great number of excellent springs are found within the city limits. Among these we may not omit to mention the sulphate spring in the western part of the city, which has within a few years attracted the public attention, and now forms one of the inducements for the sojourn in our city of those in search of health.

The public spirit of some of our citizens has recently projected considerable improvements at this point, whereby its attractions are greatly increased, and it is rapidly becoming a place of public resort. All things considered we may safely assert the prophesy of that far-seeing statesman, John C. Calhoun, is in process of rapid fulfillment, who predicted while passing through the place in 1847, that it was destined ultimately to become the largest inland city of the South.

This hasty sketch has been prepared under very unfavorable circumstances, in the midst of severe family afflictions, and other pressing engagements, and will doubtless be found defective in many particulars, but it was called for in haste, and is given to the public without further apology for what it is worth.

“Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci.”

We advocate the education of the masses in the great laws of Health and the protection of the people from the imposition of QUACKS.

We strive for the promotion of a pure Literature, and the cultivation of a universal taste for the true and beautiful, the chaste and the instructive in letters.
