CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA

USE OF UNITED STATES STAMPS AND ENVELOPES IN THE SOUTHERN STATES AFTER SECESSION

The United States continued its postal service in the South after secession until June 1, 1861. United States stamps and stamped envelopes were used, and mail was carried in the seceded States, between the South and the North and abroad. On June 1, 1861 the Confederacy put its rates into effect, and use of its handstamps or stamps was required. United States stamps then became invalid, and interchange of mail ended. Mail was sent by private express Companies for a short while, but thereafter the only mail between South and North was delivered via Flag of Truce.

THE POSTMASTERS PROVISIONALS STAMPS AND ENVELOPES

After June 1, 1861 when United States stamps were invalidated in the territory comprising the seceded Southern States, until the issuance of the Confederate States Government stamps, the postmasters prepared temporary substitutes for the franking of letters. These were printed, lithographed, or handstamped adhesive stamps, and printed or handstamped envelopes which were sold to the public in advance of use.

THE HANDSTAMPED PAID MARKINGS

Where Provisional stamps and envelopes were not available or had not been purchased in advance of use, Confederate Postmasters handstamped "Paid" and the amount of postage on citizens letters as they were brought to the Post Office for mailing. Required postage was then either paid in cash or charged to the citizens account.

THE GENERAL ISSUE STAMPS

More than four months elapsed after the Confederate Government commenced operating its own postal service before it succeeded in producing stamps for general use. On October 16, 1861, the lithographed 5c Green stamps was first placed on sale, and the 10c Blue and 2c Green followed. Later these colors were changed to Blue for the 5c and Rose for the 10c. Then came the 1c and 5c stamps from typographed plates made in England, and finally, the engraved 2c, 10c and 20c stamps which were produced in the Confederacy.

THE OFFICIAL, SEMI-OFFICIAL, AND STATE
OFFICIAL ENVELOPES

Only the official correspondence of the Post Office Department was carried FREE in the Confederacy, and then only when enclosed in specially imprinted envelopes each signed by an authorized official. Supplies of United States stamped envelopes were overprinted and used as well as regular commercial envelopes. When used for private correspondence postage was required.

Semi-Official envelopes were those imprinted by the other Government Departments, Military units, various Bureaus and Offices, as well as those of the several State Governments and their divisions, on which payment of postage was required for all usages.

THE FLAG-OF-TRUCE, PRISONER-OF-WAR,

Under certain strict rules, letters were permitted to pass "through-the-lines" between the North and the South. Whether sent by or to civilians or prisoners-of-war, they were subject to examination, and had to be addressed via Fortress Monroe, Va. endorsed "per Flag of Truce." Often enclosed in outer envelopes bearing postage of the side from which sent, the inner envelopes bore the stamp of the other side, or were sent through postage due. Sometimes only one cover was used, bearing both stamps. Prisoner-of-war letters were usually endorsed "Examined" or so handstamped by the prisoner censor upon sending or receipt. "Through-the-lines" letters occasionally went by other routes or were secretly passed through. Soldiers letters could be sent "due" when endorsed with senders rank and regiment.

BLOCKADE COVERS

Mail to or from abroad went on blockade-runners, chiefly through the seaports of Charleston, Wilmington and Mobile. Such covers were usually postmarked STEAM or STEAM SHIP and an additional ship fee of 2c was charged. Mail also went across the blockaded Mississippi River by Government express at a special rate of 40c, some was secretly run out of captured cities such as New Orleans to Confederate points, and some went via Mexico, Cuba or the West Indies to or from the North or Europe.

Patriotic Covers

Covers manufactured in the Confederacy bearing Patriotic designs, are far rarer than their Northern counterparts, largely because of shortages of supplies and manpower in the South. As many envelopes bearing Confederate designs were printed in the North and sold as "Rebel souvenirs," very few other than covers showing actual postal usage in the Confederacy can be accepted as genuine. Matching Patriotic lettersheets are rarely found, but home made Patriotic covers are occasionally seen, as are Patriotic labels or stickers. Covers bearing Confederate flags are the commonest, with their stars reflecting the growing number of the seceded states, while Cannon, Soldiers, Tents, Portraits, and other Patriotic designs also exist. Captured Northern Patriotic covers postally used in the Confederacy, are occasionally found.

TURNED and HOMEMADE COVERS

Shortage of paper in the Confederacy was the cause of turning envelopes inside-out for re-use a second and sometimes a third time. It also resulted in envelopes being made at home out of any available paper. Wall-paper, book pages, maps, checks, forms and wrappers of all kinds, if printed only on one side, were often so used.
